

INTERNATIONAL PARLIAMENTARY FORUM

World Congress of Families - Madrid, May 25, 2012

Mr. Juan Sebastián Morales Gámez

President

Constitución y Libertad (Spain)

During the last years, in Spain, as much as in our surrounding countries we have appreciated that the different governments approve legal projects which attempts against life, family and human dignity.

Today, we are here to defend pro-life, pro-family and pro-dignity policies, because these questions must be the main ones, as they shape the real basement for our society.

We all know the family is the first social institution and that is why it must be respected and defended by public authorities.

In many occasions we can appreciate the debate so called “gender ideology” is biting more and more as a soft rain in politicians and shows up in the laws the Parliaments approve.

In Spain, the Government chaired by José Luis Rodríguez Zapatero proposed some laws which clearly attempted against life and family, as for example, the laws for homosexual marriages, abortion, citizenship education, etc. Most of these legal projects, now, with the Popular Party Government, are still valid.

The question the civil society must ask ourselves is: what can we do to change the situation we are in?

For me, the answer is to make pressure on the politic parties with actual possibilities to govern, to make these topics items in our politics agenda; in case that with the exerted pressure we could not get the desirable results, we will have to raise another means to channel our ideals and values.

That channeling must demand the politic class a deep reform of the electoral law to allow another parties, which defend pro-life and pro-family ideals and values could get the power, o at least, have parliamentary representation. In the other hand we must demand as well an internal democracy in politic parties to allow representatives of all the political sensibilities play an active part of the determined ideological project.

Speaking about something else, today is more necessary than ever to defend and reward birth rates, we are suffering a deep demographic winter and it must be indisputable to reward those couples who decide to have several children, as they are the future of our society, the streets action –reaction must be today more present than ever, if we do not fight and press in an active and pedagogical way into the politic parties agendas for them to pay a higher attention at pro-life and pro-family activism we will not be able to do nothing as citizens and which is worst, we will have nothing to offer to society.

Altogether we can get out of the difficult situation in which we are, but it depends on everyone of us to make this effort and get set upon into the electoral programs of the politic parties, as when we talk about life and family, we talk about the future of our society and that is something really serious.

Mr. Juan Sebastián Morales Gámez

President

Constitución y Libertad (Spain)